COL. MANN ARRESTED ON PERJURY CHAR

NEW YORK, SATURDAY, JANUARY 27, 1906.

NEW ACCUSATION AGAINST OWNER OF TOWN TOPICS

Charged with Swearing Falsely That He Did Not "O. K." Reginald Ward Letter Brought Out During the Hapgood Trial

A warrant for the arrest of Col. William d'Alton Mann, of Town Topics, was issued by Justice McAvoy, of the Court of Special Sessions, this afternoon. Immediately after the Justice had signed the warrant it was placed in the hands of Detective-Sergeant Flood, of the District-Attorney's office, who arrested Mann at his office.

The charge in the information upon based is perjury. Col. Mann is alleged to have sworn falsely that he did not put his. "O. K." on a letter written to his editor, Moses Ellis Wooster, concern ing Count Reginald Ward.

re was quite a procession of those no had been interested in the defence Editor Hapgood filing in and out of he corridors of Special Sessions this atternoon, Jomes W. Osborne, Robert J. Collier and Moses Ellis Wooster headed the parade that pased into the Justice's chambers. Then came Ed-ward M. Shepard with clerks and al-lendants. Deputy Assistant District-Attorney Hart and a delegation from Mr. Jarome's office brought up the rear. The case against Col. Mann had evitly been framed up over night, his estimony gone over carefully and basis by a perjury charge found in his denial t his "O. K." David N. Carvalho, the and-writing expert, was summoned to ndards of the Colonel's handrritings that had been put in evidence turing the Happoot trial.

Mr. Carvalho arrived at Justice Mcter his testimony the entire cortegs firm of Post & McCord, was arrested lawyers and witnesses went to the by order of Coroner Acritelli.

Mann Says "Shakedown:" Col. Mann sat in his office all the aftranson waiting for something to transies. He stroked his gay beard, puffed eavily and smiled hrouly.

"Do you know he are not in the repora arrested this afternoon" the repora areated this afternoon" the repora areated this afternoon" the reporas asked.

"I do," said the Colonel. "In fact I grew humorous.

Inspectors and Captains, Fearing Trouble if the Side Doors Swing, Expected to Enforce Excise Law Strictly.

Word went forth from Mulberry street late this afternoon to the Inspectors of police in all the boroughs that if to-morrow isn't "dry" Commissioner Bingham will make trouble for them on Monday.

In all likelihood there will be but few saloons which will have the latch-string out on their sode doors. For a mysterious dread has seized upon the liquor dealers as well as upon the rank and file of the police force. They fear Bingham will take a smash at them at the first op-

Zolver was seen on the street on Thursday. Mr. March, who has an office at No. 37, missed thin yesterday, but he was not alarmed until last night, when the woman at whose house Zolver had his meals called to see why the old man had falled to appear. March summoned Fireman Conly from the engine company next door, and when they found the door locked entered the apartment via the fire-escape. They found Zolver dead in bed.

The police and Public Administrator searched the rooms. They found a builtetin hoard on the wall showing the dates on which the various banks paid interest. There was mine cents in a vest pocket. Besides the bank books there was a mortgago for $5,000.

"Zolver was a me old man," said here very much excited. He said he had just discovered that his wife had deposited $36,000 in her maiden name."
